All Star Charity Concert Cares for Seniors with Dementia

On the evening at 7 PM, the "Lingering Cantonese Melody" All Star Charity Concert will take place at Sydney Town Hall. The lineup includes well-known Hong Kong singer Tong Po-Yu, Guangzhou Performing Arts Association chairman Liao Bai-Wei, as well as strong singers like Zhai Huijuan, Wu Wei, Liu Tiejun, Ma Zheng Meiling, and Wu You. The winner of this year's "Cantonese Singing Contest" will also perform on the same stage. The songs will be a mix of Cantonese and Mandarin, with the full setlist announced prior to the event. Justin Chan, chairman of the Community Support Foundation Australia, chairman of the "Caring for Seniors with Dementia" charity event, and executive vice president of the Cantonese Association of Australia, said that dementia is one of the heaviest issues for Chinese elderly families and also one of the areas with the least Chinese-language information. All net proceeds from the concert ticket sales will be donated to public welfare projects for caring for seniors with dementia. In a recently recorded greeting, performer Tong Po-Yu said: "Songs can accompany a person for many years. You might forget what happened back then, but when the music plays, the memories come back. This time, we want to help seniors who are gradually losing their memory. A familiar song can be like a warm light for them." Liao Bai-Wei added, "I've been singing for over thirty years... but the most unforgettable performances are not on the biggest stages, but every time I can help someone with my singing."
